

This proposal introduced by the FCC will diminish the protections afforded myself and my household under Indiana law. With a lower national standard which will preempt Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law, more UNWANTED phone calls will be had by all who signed up for this protection from unwanted solicitation. Since the initiation of the Indiana law we have received less than 2 or 3 of these phone calls each month, where as before it was more than 5 a week. Any company having my name on a list where I had previous correspondance some time ago should not be able to consider myself "an existing customer." If I require there services at the current time, then I will contact them. I do not wish to be bothered by a company whom I have not had contact with over a year ago. I hope you take these comments as well as others you might receive opposing lower national standards concerning this issue into consideration before implementing any substandard law.

Thank you for your consideration.
